

Principal's Message

LOVE is the need of the time. People have defined and redefined love in different ways in different centuries. Saint Paul has written about love :

“If I speak in human and angelic tongues
but do not have love,
I am a resounding gong or a clashing cymbal;
If I have the gift of prophecy
and comprehend all mysteries and all knowledge;
If I have all faith so as to move mountains,
but do not have love, I am nothing;
Ref: (Bible: 1 Corinthians 13: 1-2)

The word 'LOVE' has different connotations or rich vocabulary. Like – Philia i.e. non-romantic love between equals, Erotas i.e. romantic love, Agape i.e. spiritual or charitable love, Storgé i.e. affection between parents and children, Theophilia i.e. love of God, etc. Actually love is an experience or feeling. So human being experiences it differently as the 'blind men who felt an elephant'.

All religions preach love. Bhagavad Gita highlights Nishkama Karma, self-less or desireless action which is an expression of love. It is an intrinsic human value.

Often we say 'God is Love'. No human mind can comprehend God. If God is incomprehensible, then so is his love. We cannot define God in the sense of delimiting exhaustively who he is, but we can nonetheless describe him truthfully. Love starts with God. The love of God is demonstrated by the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross. As children of God, we will also be growing in the love of God. The cosiest feeling in life is to love and to be loved. We do understand God because of his love for us. Love is the quintessence of life. There is nothing more pleasing and more rewarding than love in all life.

Scripture says “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.”

(Mathew 22:35-40)

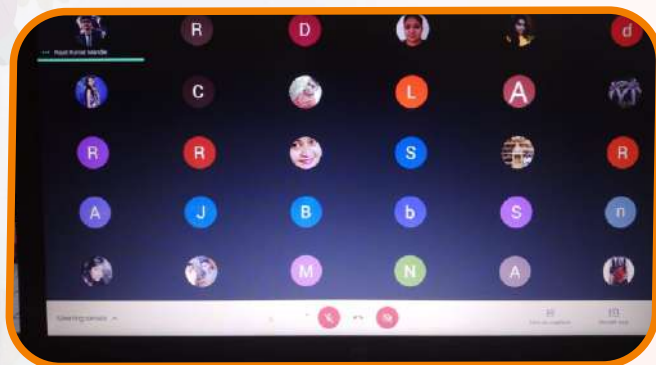

Yes, dear students, “Love is patient, love is kind. It is not jealous, it is not pompous, it is not inflated, it is not rude, it does not seek its own interests, it is not quick tempered, it does not brood over injury, it does not rejoice over wrongdoing but rejoices with the truth. It bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.”

Taj Mahal, Palace, Bhopal.

If I told you I had just visited the Taj Mahal that was built by Shah Jahan whilst I was staying in Bhopal, you could quite rightly wonder what I meant. But I meant exactly that, as this monument was built by his namesake Shah Jahan; she was the begum of Bhopal in the late 19th century.

And unlike the Taj Mahal in Agra, it's namesake in Bhopal is now a complete ruin and not really on the tourist map at all. I arrived outside the main entrance, which was firmly shut, and banged repeatedly on the old wooden door for a couple of minutes. Even the facade of this palace gives little clue as to what lies within, with crumbling masonry, faded colours and the plaster almost falling from the walls as my door banging exploits continued.

Eventually a guard opened the door, somewhat in a daze (I may have woken him up), and offered to show me around...

Originally called Raj Bhavan, but renamed Taj Mahal on the suggestion of the British, this palace was commissioned in 1871 by the 11th ruler of Bhopal and took 13 years to complete at a reputed cost of ₹ 3,000,000. The palace has 120 rooms in total, a sheesh mahal and an elaborate fountain structure called "savan bhadon" that simulated the effect of rain. The palace's architecture is a unique combination of British, French, Mughal, Arabic and Hindu influences.

Amazingly this was one of the largest palaces ever built at the time, and was part of a complex of monuments together with the Benazir Palace (the begum's summer residence) and the Taj-ul-Masjid (one of the largest mosques in Asia), along with three surrounding lakes. The wind blowing from the lakes helped keep the palace cool even in summer!

After Partition in 1947, Nawab Hamidullah Khan allowed several Sindhi refugees to live in the palace. Many stayed there for around four years before shifting to Bairagarh, with the last of the refugees moving out in the 1980s.

Some members of the royal family of Bhopal also remained in the palace, but gradually they all moved away without the necessary finances for repairs to the building. By 2008 large parts of the palace had completely collapsed.

So what you see today is the accumulation of 70 years of neglect, except for a brief period when the state archaeology department carried out some restoration after taking it over in 2005. Since then, even the restored areas have become undone, you can't see specifically where those efforts have taken place at all. The state archaeology department now says it has no funds for any further restoration, and is unlikely to generate them in the future.
